

THINK DISASTER HAS OVERTAKEN MISSING AIRMEN

Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer Unheard From As Yet

COAST GUARDS AID

Fleet of Canadian Planes Is Ordered to Search Over Proposed Route

Search for Fliers

Three countries — the United States, Canada and Greenland — are engaged today in search for Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer, missing American fliers who became lost while attempting a flight from Canada to Sweden.

The Americans, who originally set out from Rockford, Ill., to fly to Stockholm, Sweden, were due at Mount Evans, Greenland, on Sunday morning. It was first believed that they had landed in some isolated spot on the Greenland coast, but when search failed to reveal any trace of them, the fear developed that they had been forced down somewhere in the Atlantic between the Canadian coast and the Greenland coast.

The Canadian Government had instructed the mounted police and the Coast Guard stations along the Labrador coast to make special search for the airmen.

The last heard of the airmen was on Sunday morning when they were 75 miles off Cape Chidley, on the Labrador coast.

Mount Evans, Greenland, Aug. 21—

Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer, missing American airmen who became lost while attempting a North Atlantic flight from Canada to Greenland, were more than two days overdue this morning and no trace of them had been found.

The failure of radio stations to pick up any trace of the missing airmen increased fears that disaster had overtaken their plane at sea.

The United States Coast Guard cutter Marion, which has been operating in the Hudson Strait, near the projected route of the flight, was instructed to aid in the search for the missing men.

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 21—

Rockford citizens today took new hope for the ultimate rescue of aviators Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer, lost enroute to Sweden, when it was learned a fleet of Canadian planes had been ordered out from Fort Burwell to search the course taken by the missing "Greater Rockford" monoplane.

The searching planes were ordered out last night by A. J. Wilson, head of the civil aviation branch of the Canadian Department of National Defense on telephonic request of the Rockford Chamber of Commerce.

Fort Burwell is 300 miles from Davis Straits, the region from which the adventuresome Rockford fliers were last heard. The fliers had agreed that, in the event of trouble near the Straits, they would turn back and attempt to reach Fort Burwell.

The Rockford Chamber of Commerce also cabled the Danish Government asking that its ships in the vicinity of Greenland and Labrador instruct their operators to listen constantly for radio news of the aviators.

John C. Cole, Life-Long Bristol Resident, Dies

John C. Cole, who since his birth 67 years ago, had resided within Bristol Borough, died at his home, 615 Pond street, this morning.

The late Mr. Cole attended the public schools here during his boyhood days, and later was employed as a gate-watchman at the plant of the Rohm & Haas Chemical Company, here. He was able to attend to his duties until taken ill three weeks ago. The wife of the deceased, Elizabeth Rich Cole, survives him, as do also one daughter, Mrs. James Boyle, and two sons, Horace and Albert, all of Bristol.

Mr. Cole was known by many about the town, making friends with whom ever he came in contact. Funeral arrangements will be given later.

Hulmeville

John L. Brown, son of the late Jennings and Amanda Brown, died at his Los Angeles, California, residence on Sunday. Mr. Brown was a brother of Mrs. George Douglass, of Hulmeville, and formerly resided in Oxford Valley. The body will be brought here, due notice of the funeral being given later.

The Peppy Pals sewing class will meet this evening at the home of Mrs. George Allene, Main street.

Two Studies of Husband-Slayer

Here are two interesting photos of Mrs. Frances Kirkwood, Long Island City, L. I., housewife, who, maddened at stories of her husband's alleged infidelity, wounded him so severely with a kitchen knife that he died later in a hospital. Her lawyer puts forward the novel defense that Kirkwood died from the results of an operation after the stabbing, and not from the wound inflicted by his client. The pictures were snapped in court.

ONE HUNDRED ATTEND BEANS FAMILY EVENT

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Palmer Were Hosts On Saturday

RUSSELL BEANS, PRES.

The Beans family met Saturday at the Bellmeade Stock Farm, Bristol Township, as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Palmer. There was a genuine spirit of concerned interest and close association.

The feature of the day was a long social hour which gave everyone sufficient opportunity to talk over old times and to really get to know each other. In fact, it was generally agreed that such a pleasant and satisfactory feature must be continued.

The customary and always much enjoyed family dinner was served at noon to about 100 members of the association, which gave still further occasion for friendly intercourse.

A short business meeting was called together in the afternoon with Wesley W. Naylor acting as chairman in the absence of the president. John C. Beans, who is vacationing in California. The meeting was opened with the singing of the "Family Song" by the association after which Mrs. Elizabeth B. McLaughlin gave a few vocal selections, accompanied by Miss Ethel Beans on the piano and Miss Mary E. Betts on the violin.

The election of officers followed. Those elected for the coming year are: President, Russell Beans, Trenton; vice-president, Wesley W. Naylor, Doylestown; secretary, Miss Alice Palmer, Bristol; assistant secretary, Mrs. Annett B. Funston, Philadelphia; treasurer, Mrs. Emma L. B. Naylor, Doylestown.

In a short speech of acceptance, the new president, Russell Beans, outlined a program of action for next year and particularly stressed the need for arousing the interest of the younger school generation as to the importance of this and other family reunions.

Upon invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bunting, it was decided to hold the reunion at their home near Langhorne next year.

The afternoon ended with group singing of old familiar songs led by Norman Deck, of Morrisville.

DOGGIE ROAST

A "doggie" roast will be indulged in this evening by the Ladies' Auxiliary of America Hose, Hook and Ladder Company, No. 2, at Edgely Park. Those planning to attend are asked to meet at the fire station at 7.30 o'clock.

—Mr. and Mrs. George F. Zarr, of Harriman Park, entertained for several days last week, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Post, and son, of Forty Fort, Pa.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY ENTERTAINING FRIENDS

Dorothy Morgan is Hostess at Pleasing Event Held At Edgely

GAMES ARE ENJOYED

Dorothy Morgan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Morgan, of Hightstown, N. J., who is the guest of her relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Rue, of Edgely, celebrated her ninth birthday on Monday, by entertaining a number of her friends.

A delightful time was spent playing various games and racing. Prizes were awarded to Alberta Swain, Phyllis Wisner, Dorothy Morgan and Russell Phail for racing.

At six o'clock, the guests were invited to the pavilion at Edgely Park, where a sumptuous dinner was served. Those present were:

Frances Townsend, Alberta Swain, Mary Robinson, Margaret Gilton, Phyllis Wisner, Jane Burchel, Mary Grace, Lilly Gilton, Pearl Stanley, Harold High, Jack Michael, Russell Phail, Mathew Manhurst, Jack Wisner, Charles Hubbs, Robert Robinson, Howard Baker, Burden Pedrick, Mr. and Mrs. John Wisner and children, William and Gertrude, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Gilton, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ott, Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Rue, all of Bristol, and Edgely.

Mildred and Evelyn Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. William Morgan, Mrs. Mary Louellen, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Scott, of Trenton, N. J.; Mrs. Emma Fansac, of Hightstown, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Chamberlain, of Bloomfield, N. J.

Dorothy received many pretty gifts.

Soon to Change Terminus of Trans-Continental Air Mail

It is noted that the eastern terminus for the trans-continental air-mail line will soon be moved from Hadley Field, New Brunswick, N. J., to Newark.

Trips are now being made daily between Philadelphia and Newark.

With the transfer of the eastern terminus to Newark, and the start of daily trips by planes from that point to Philadelphia, it is pointed out that pieces mailed in San Francisco and other western cities will reach Philadelphia in a period of 36 hours.

In time, should an airport be established here, the same would hold true for Bristol, greatly benefiting local business establishments.

MOVES TO NEW HOME

Charles LaPolla has moved from 214 Market street to 1418 Farragut avenue, and is now serving his customers at his real estate office which adjoins his recently completed home there.

ENTERTAINS FRIENDS IN HONOR OF BIRTHDAY

Julia Tomesani is Hostess at Very Pleasing Affair at Parents' Home

RECEIVES MANY GIFTS

Julia Tomesani, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Tomesani, of Mill street, celebrated her eighth birthday on Sunday afternoon, by entertaining a number of her friends at her home. A most pleasant time was had playing various games, and late in the afternoon the children were invited to the dining room, where a sumptuous repast was served.

In the center of the table was placed a large birthday cake containing eight candles. The children then departed for their homes after wishing Julia many more happy birthdays.

Those present were: Stella Moffo, Dorothy Downing, Bunney Brunner, Margaret Gilton, Virginia Zanni, Lilly Gilton, Leavia Zanni, Tony Zanni, Edio Zanni, Eugene and Frank Sabatini, Miss Jennie Poulina, Miss Eva Weasner, Miss Anna Di Nunzio, Miss Rose Rago, Mrs. Anna Sabatini, Mrs. E. Rago.

Julia was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

Legion Leaves Tomorrow To Attend Big Convention

Close to 50 Bristolians, including members of the Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 352, American Legion, the bugle corps of same, and those affiliated with the post auxiliary, will leave by special pullman car tomorrow evening for Uniontown, Pa., there to attend the state convention of the American Legion and Auxiliary.

The car, which will leave here at 9.07 p. m., will be used by the Bristol flocks as headquarters throughout the days of the convention. The sessions will close on Sunday evening.

To Uniontown which is located southwest of Pittsburgh, will be carried in fine manner the name of Bristol. The bugle corps men will be attired in their snappy uniforms, and will compete in all events for the bugle corps of the state. It is stated that throughout the western section of Pennsylvania there are a number of these lively musical organizations.

In the group from this borough will be the following post officers: Commander W. Ray Smith; senior vice-commander, Richard W. Fechtenburg; junior vice-commander, Robert Downing; finance officer, Ralph B. Scheffy. Commander Smith and William Reilly were appointed as delegates at a meeting a few months ago; while George W. Croner and Arthur S. Zug were selected as alternates.

The delegation from here has an excellent opportunity of securing the prize for the largest delegation attending from the greatest distance.

Among the high lights of the convention days will be an aerial sham battle. The big parade is scheduled for Saturday, the 25th. At the annual convention held in York last year it took four hours for the parade participants to pass a given point.

Of the close to 70,000 legionnaires in Pennsylvania, it is expected that close to 25,000 will be at the convention city. The yearly promenade of the 40 'n' 8 Societe and the 8 'n' 40 Societe will also take place during the week.

VISITING BROTHER

Miss Catharine Moore, of Buffalo, N. Y., is visiting her brother, Bart Moore, of 222 Lafayette street. Mrs. Moore will return to her home on September 2nd.

NATURAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION HOLDS ITS MID-SUMMER FIELD DAY; THE CUTTALOSSA VALLEY GIVES FORTH MUCH TO NATURE LOVERS

Home of Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor Adjoining Old Lumberton Granite Quarry, Is Rendezvous — Many Fine Plants Discovered on Walk Through Wilderness Section Along Delaware.

NEW HOPE, Aug. 21.—The Bucks County Natural Science Association held its mid-summer field-day meeting, Saturday, in Cuttalousa Valley, Solebury township, with the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor, by invitation, the rendezvous. Uniquely and charmingly situated on the northern declivity of the Cuttalousa, the Taylor home adjoins the one-time famous Lumberton Granite Quarry of the Philadelphia Kembles and overlooks the Delaware River to the east. Nature and the now almost forgotten craftsmanship of the old time stone masons combined have given to the Taylor home a distinct charm even in this neighborhood of supreme scenic beauty.

A red shale lane winds around the hill from the Cuttalousa road to the rear of the house. The house itself, which is set high above all the other dwellings of the ancient hamlet of Lumberton, is also approached by a long series of stone and wooden steps leading straight up the steep hillside. On the edge of the lawn crowning the high bluff, standing like a giant look-out over the waters of the Delaware, is a tall and handsome hemlock spruce tree, possibly much over a century old. Other tall, shapely and majestic trees add their touch of natural grandeur to the spacious lawn. Near the front of the house, on either side of a walk, are two fine specimens of tree box (Buxus sempervirens), one of which forms a morning sun screen for an old-fashioned springhouse, close by the house and supplied with cold spring water of singular clarity and purity. An unusual oldtime construction is found on the Taylor premises. A surface stream of water from the plateau to the westward is carried through the property by a sort of sunken trench or aqueduct of heavy masonry, from six to ten feet deep and probably six feet wide, over which is thrown a small bridge or two for convenience in crossing. An odd circumstance of this below-the-surface aqueduct is that it runs directly through the large stone barn, now in ruins. Save for a small flower garden and clumps of cultivated plants and shrubs here and there on the lawn, nature has been allowed to have her own way in beautifying this attractive old premises.

Lumberton is a centre of much local historic interest, and among some of the scientists present the question was asked, but not definitely answered, whether the Taylor house was the home in his youth of General Zebulon M. Pike, hero of the War of 1812, surveyor, naturalist and pioneer government explorer of the lower Mississippi Valley, who for ten or a dozen years lived in Lumberton.

The party lunched on the summit of the cliff overlooking the Lumberton Quarry, a part of the Taylor premises, possibly 250 feet above the Delaware River. Here a number of photographs were taken. The view north from this point is almost primeval. So luxuriantly wooded is this part of the Delaware valley that, for a distance of half a dozen miles up the river, nothing was visible save the vast stretch of tree growth, the cloud-flecked blue sky, and below, the river quite muddy from recent rains. No human habitation appeared above the sea of green — nothing but part of the ancient wooden bridge at Lumberville and the white tip of a steeple at Lower Black Eddy.

After lunch the party started on a botanizing trip up the Cuttalousa valley, from the river to the famous "horse-trough," once so popular in the "falling-top carriage" days, and erected, so the inscription on the marble slab in the masonry recites, by the generosity of nameless "lovers of the beautiful."

Along the wayside of this winding valley the predominant and conspicuous objects of interest were the magnificent growths of the American rhododendron (Rhododendron maximum). Its bloom had passed with July, but such a stately shrub, with its shapely, leathery dark green leaves, fitting so harmoniously into its sombre setting in the shadowy nooks, needs not even its own pearly pink and white blossoms to testify to its status as the "most magnificent of our native shrubs"—a description which an eminent naturalist has so justly affixed to it.

Next to the beauty of the rhododendrons came that of the ferns. Especially the lady fern, the Claytonias, the evergreen winter fern, the Christmas fern, the polypody, the woodsias, and a few others, here in a habitat peculiarly to their liking attain perfection of growth and comeliness. Residents along the river, very rightly, most people think, have declared war upon thoughtless despoilers of these beautiful rhododendrons and ferns and have put forth means of protection. So long as they are so protected, these chaste gifts of nature should hold their own here in pristine glory.

Like the Pannaucussing valley, but unlike the Smithtown and Geddes Run gorges, which cut through the Delaware River plateaus on the Pennsylvania side, the hills which enclose the Cuttalousa valley are at certain places far enough apart to permit of small intervening stretches of rich meadow, where cat-tail flags and several species of the rush family thrive and the eupatoriums—Joe Pye weed and thoroughwort—the asters, the various sunflowers and numerous goldenrods spread their mosaic of rich colors, preparatory to the gorgeous autumnal change in foliage that makes the Delaware valley the objective of many sightseers in September and October.

One of the rarer botanical specimens found was the alternate leaved dogwood (cornus alternifolia), here a shrub 10 feet high is found at only a few stations in Bucks county. Birds observed during the walk included the Turkey Vulture, Carolina Wren, Hawk, Pewee, Towhee, Broad-winged Hawk and House Wren. The sora rail is said to nest in the Pannaucussing and Cuttalousa valleys, but none was seen on Saturday. A report of much interest to members of the association was the observation of a white barn swallow by Miss Elizabeth Cox in the territory near Ingham Spring about a month ago. This unusual specimen of albinism was also seen by several other people.

Members of the association who took part in the field-day trip were Miss Elizabeth Woodman, Mrs. Clarence Smith and daughters, of Wycombe; Miss Elizabeth Cox, of Buckingham; Miss Agnes Cunningham and George Harris, of Newtown; Mrs. Minna Haimbach, of Langhorne; Clifford Black, of Gardenville; Mr. and Mrs. J. Kirk Zatherman and George MacReynolds, of Doylestown.

At the end of the outing a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. and Mrs. Taylor for their hospitality and the freedom of their home and its charming surroundings, graciously extended for the day to the members of the association.

A very pleasant evening was spent by all those present and the card party was a financial success.

TWO APPEALS ARE STARTED IN CO. TAX CASES

Camden County Council of Boy Scouts Claims to Be Public Charity

MANY ACTIONS ARE ON

Elizabeth Hunsberger Asks $5,000 for Damages She Claims

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 21.—Business in the Court of Common Pleas the past few days was brisk. A number of new suits have been started and two appeals in county tax cases taken.

Viola M. Ferguson, of West Rockhill township, has started an action for divorce against her husband, Martin Ferguson, of 2781 Pratt street, Philadelphia, on the grounds of cruel and barbarous treatment. They were married at Elkton, April 2, 1923.

A writ of replevin has been issued in the Court of Common Pleas by Reuben A. Moyer against Michael Welz, Dublin, landlord, and Frank B. Bertles, constable, Doylestown, to replevy goods valued at $1845, alleged to be the property of the plaintiff, and unjustly seized by the defendants. It is returnable September 10.

Another writ of replevin has been issued by Catherine Schaefer against the Doylestown Agricultural Livestock Development Association to replevy on Eli Ferris wheel valued at $500. This action was made returnable September 10.

A capias in trespass has been issued by John Comes and Mamie Comes, of Edison, against Nicholas Polen, Jr., son of the proprietor of the New Galena Hotel. It is alleged that Mrs. Comes on July 9 was a passenger on a trolley car at Edison, and that after she had stepped off the car on the right side at the Edison switch, she was struck down by a coupe driven, it is alleged, in a reckless manner between 65 and 70 miles an hour by Nicholas Polen, Jr. As a result of the accident the woman sustained a broken left arm at the wrist, her nose was almost severed and she was unconscious for three days. The plaintiffs are asking $10,000 damages.

Another capias in trespass has been issued by Elizabeth Hunsberger against Chas. Parker, asking $5000 damages as a result of injuries alleged to have been sustained on the afternoon of April 29 on the Doylestown and Norristown highway near Chalfont. It is alleged that the plaintiff was riding as the guest of Harry N. Geisinger in a car operated by Marvin Geisinger, when the Parker car crashed into the Hunsberger car.

An appeal from the refusal of the County Commissioners of Bucks county to exempt certain land from taxation at a meeting on May 22, this year, has been taken in the Court of Common Pleas by the Camden County Council, Boy Scouts of America, against the County of Bucks. The tract is located on Pennington Island in Tinicum township, and contains thirty-seven acres. It is claimed that the Boy Scout Council is purely a public charity.

A similar appeal has been taken against the decision of the County Commissioner by Joseph J. Broadhurst Langhorne lawyer, against the County of Bucks. The appellant claims that his assessment on property that he owns in Langhorne Manor and vicinity, is too high.

William S. Boyer Dies; Was 71 Years of Age

EMILIE, Aug. 21.—William S. Boyer, father of the Rev. William C. Boyer, of Emilie, died at his Phoenixville home on Saturday. Death occurred quite suddenly as Mr. Boyer had but recently visited here. He frequently came to Emilie and visited his son, making friends with many in this neighborhood. The deceased was 71 years of age.

Funeral service will be held on Thursday at 9 a. m., daylight saving time from his late residence, 114 Third avenue, Phoenixville, Pa. Friends may call between the hours of seven and nine Wednesday evening.

RETURN HOME

Mrs. William Donnell and daughter, Vera, of Mulberry street, returned on Saturday from a week's stay at Atlantic City.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 21, 1928

1920 AND 1928
A little more than eight years ago the New York World editorially characterized Herbert Hoover as the living man best equipped for the Presidency of the United States and pledged itself to disregard partisan consideration in order to advance his candidacy for that exalted office. A week or two ago The World republished its 1920 declaration for Hoover accompanied by another editorial explaining somewhat laboriously why that newspaper is not supporting Mr. Hoover this year.

Stripping The World's elaborate explanation of its rhetorical sophistry and its effusive eulogy of Mr. Smith, one finds two arguments that may be paraphrased as follows:

1—This is 1928, not 1920, and a newspaper has a right to change its mind.

2—Mr. Hoover for almost eight years has been a cabinet officer under two Republican Presidents.

The first point is well taken; The World has a right to make an about face in policy and principle, if it so desires.

The second argument is tenable only from an old-fashioned partisan point of view—a point of view which The World vigorously repudiated in its 1920 editorial. If, however, The World chooses to return to the "discredited partisanship" which it renounced and denounced eight years ago, it is entitled to oppose Mr. Hoover simply because he has served his country as a cabinet officer under Republican Presidents.

But will the average fair-minded citizen find such an argument convincing? Will anyone except hide-bound Democratic partisans join The World in opposing Mr. Hoover for being a straight-forward Republican? Will even such partisans declare themselves against the sound and wise economic policies of the Coolidge administration which Secretary Hoover has helped to formulate and execute? In brief, will these Democratic critics repudiate existing prosperity simply because it is Republican prosperity?

The World, without so intending, seems to have struck a more effective blow in Mr. Hoover's behalf this time than it did eight years ago. The clear-thinking voter will find in The World's Hoover editorial of 1928 a new and powerful argument to add to those set forth in the same newspaper's pro-Hoover declaration of 1920: namely, that Mr. Hoover now has added seven and a half years of valuable experience in administrative office to the magnificent record of executive accomplishment and humanitarian achievement so fervently acclaimed eight years ago by one of his foremost present day journalist adversaries.

SYNOPSIS

An all-night card game is drawing to a close in the old Sweet Springs Inn. The players are beginning to take stock of their winnings, when Preston tosses into the game a small miniature of Betsy Patterson. He offers to stake it against a hundred pounds, boasting that Betsy gave it him herself. A stranger, passing the open window, overhears the remark, and challenges the speaker. A fight ensues in which Preston is wounded and his adversary goes off with the miniature, leaving a purse of gold behind on the table.

CHAPTER I—Continued

"Ay, a French tutor who tosses gold about as though it were words," another added, impressed. "Gentlemen," he turned to his companions with a puzzled look on his face, "we have a mystery here." "A mystery indeed," another agreed. "Who the devil is this fellow?" "Here, Sam! Sam!" Preston looked about him, still rubbing his twisted wrist. "Where the devil's that blackape? Sam!" "Here, suh! Yas, suh!" Sam came forward from his hiding place behind the door of the bar, grinning broadly. "Bring me a whiskey, quick!"

CHAPTER II

Leaving the scene of his activities behind him, the man in black walked hastily down the slope and towards the woods as though he were bent on some urgent errand. At last he entered the heavily shaded part of the path. Overhead and a heavier underbrush clustered. The ripple of a spring could be faintly heard, and a great deal of splashing almost drowning out the ripple. With much acumen the dog dashed on ahead and barked loudly. "Spot! Spot!" The clear voice of a woman sounded through the underbrush as the dog darted off, worming his way beneath the thick growth on his belly. A tremendous sound of splashing. Then another call.

"Spot! Drop that! Drop it this instant, str."

But the dog stood pawing the ground, barking, leaping up and down and generally worrying a shoe. There, splashing water about like some woodland goddess, stood a girl of eighteen. Her knee-length pantaloons were tucked up about her slender legs and her dress, shoes, hat and a remaining stocking lay in a soft heap on the bank. Her rounded, white shoulders gleamed like alabaster in the sun that sifted through the leafy shade, and touched to molten copper the glorious red of her soft hair that was drawn high off her neck and topped with a little mass of curls. The golden red masses were arranged closely about the ears, with escaping curls caressing the soft pink of the cheeks and the white forehead. Now she gesticulated at the dog, but still with no effect, for he had already dropped the shoe, seized a stocking, and was back into the underbrush.

The animal came out on the other side of the shrubbery, disdaining the path that led around it. He pursued his course but only for a few short bounds. There he met the man in black, and with a leap he was jumping up and the branches of the trees interlocked, and through their lacy foliage came only faint glints of dancing sunbeams. The soft wood moss grew lush and green on rocks and boulders, and even attempted to spring up underfoot and provide a velvet carpet. Squirrels ran nimbly by, taking to trees at the approach of a human being, and at above on low branches, chattering and flicking their bushy tails about in a thoroughly injured manner. But the man in black did not pause.

"And, may I ask where you were,—earlier?"

After some fifteen minutes had elapsed, he approached a tree—certainly a tree that appeared exactly like its comrades, but to the man it seemed to carry some special significance, for he stopped and looked about him. He paced back and forth for a few moments, and then consulted a heavily enameled watch. Then he thrust his fingers into a tree and thrust his fingers into a tree and thrust his fingers into a tree. He opened the note, slowly.

"A lady," he read, "may be kept waiting only by her husband or her lover, and I have neither. Your manners are sadly in need of improvement." He smiled. Then he began to laugh. And then he finally thrust the missive back into his pocket.

He glanced around as though debating his course of action. Before him lay the continuation of the path; behind him, the hotel. But even as he hesitated he noticed a slight noise in the underbrush, and in another moment a big retriever dog came leaping through the bushes, trailing a limp object from his mouth.

"Here, Spot! Spot!" he called. The dog came bounding over at the tutor's call, jumping up and down, and licking the man's hands affectionately, and dropping his light burden. The man stooped and picked it up. A woman's stocking. "Spot! Go find your mistress," the man commanded, giving the animal a final pat.

The dog turned in the direction that led into the woods, and with a backward glance at the man, started on his way. The tutor thrust the stocking into his pocket and followed on the trail of his guide. A short walk, and man and dog came to a sort of clearing, where the trees were less dense, down, fawning on him, depositing his trophy at the tutor's feet. The man stopped to pat the dog and to pick up the stocking on the path. But as he bent over, there was a collision. A strange apparition appeared on the path, running, and almost fell over the form of the man in black. A flash of red hair; a display of long, pink-fleshed limbs. The man straightened up. A terrified scream, and the apparition disappeared behind the kindly shelter of the bushes. The man smiled—and waited.

"Are you—are you still there?" the voice came from behind the brush, a little tremulously and somewhat muffled, as though the speaker were struggling with something that rather obstinately was refusing to go over the head.

"Yes, Ma'mselle, I am," the man in black returned. "I am waiting."

"Which is more than you were earlier this morning," came the caustic reply. And then the speaker emerged from behind the bushes, shoes and Lavinia hat in hand, walking gingerly and stopping carefully.

"Mademoiselle Patterson," the tutor bowed low.

"And, may I ask where you were—earlier, Monsieur La Vert?" Betsy Patterson questioned, her blue eyes, fringed with long, dark lashes, flashing fire and turning almost to a green that matched the sheer, daintily flowered muslin dress with the high waisted bodice and the lace frill about the neck that set off the pliant, vivacious face. The long, clinging skirt with its shorter over the dress, revealed the beauty of the lithe, graceful form, as Mistress Patterson came forward and faced her tutor accusingly.

The man remained silent under her direct gaze, shaking his head as though he were debating as to the best excuse to make. Certainly, he couldn't speak of the actions of the morning to a lady. It was a gentleman's affair, and, as such, demanded secrecy—at least from himself.

"Ah, Ma'mselle, I am sorry, but I—I was detained—unavoidably detained," Monsieur finally bowed. "But may I ask—why are you here?"

A safe place to live—

This thought is uppermost in the minds of every individual seeking a place of residence today.

SAFE

As to health
As to keeping children away from lanes of traffic
As to open spaces in which children may play
As to the general surroundings of the community.

SAFETY

in every sense of the word is typified in the modern dwellings which can be rented from me for $25 per month.

Every house is constructed of brick—safety from fire.

Every house is sewered — safety from disease-breeding spots.

Every house is lighted by electricity—safety from antiquated lighting systems.

Every house faces on open spaces, thus having plenty of light and fresh air—safety as to health.

Every house is far from the main highways of traffic — safety for the children.

Two-story brick residences containing six rooms and bath for $25 per month. All newly papered and painted throughout. Conveniences which are to be found in any modern house today: electricity, gas, hot-air heater, water.

All are located in a desirable residential section and close to railroad station and industries.

STORES

A number of small stores in good locations suitable for grocery stores and meat markets. Rents moderate.

HOW TO QUALIFY TO VOTE FOR PRESIDENT NOV. 6

State Chairman Martin Issues Information on Assessment and Registration

Philadelphia, Aug. 21.—Qualification for assessment and registration, a preliminary to voting in November's presidential election, is a matter of greatest importance to the voting population of Pennsylvania right now, in the opinion of General Edward Martin, chairman of the Republican State Committee. In a statement issued today, Chairman Martin urged the electors of Pennsylvania to attend to this civic duty at the first opportunity.

He said that to be really effective, support of Hoover and Curtis and the whole Republican ticket must be translated into votes in the ballot box election day, November 6th.

"Of paramount importance in the presidential campaign," said General Martin, "is personal registration in cities of the first, second and third classes, and assessment and registration in boroughs and townships. Every man and woman interested in the election of Hoover and Curtis should see to it that they are qualified to vote.

"One must have been a resident of the state for one year to be qualified to vote, but a native Pennsylvanian, or one who had been a qualified elector of the state and moved elsewhere and returned, must have resided in the state thereafter for at least six months.

"One must be a resident of the precinct or division in which he or she desires to vote for at least two months prior to election day, November 6th.

"In order to vote, a citizen must have paid a state or county tax within two years of the November election.

"Saturday, October 6th, is the last day upon which tax can be paid to qualify voters for the coming election.

"Electors in townships and boroughs should keep these facts in mind: If you are already enrolled and registered in your election district in a township or borough, it is not necessary to do so again.

"If you are a new resident in a township or borough, or having removed from another district, you should call on the assessor and have him add your name to his list. Inquire of your neighbors or visit the polling place to ascertain the name and address of the assessor. The assessor is required by law to be at the polling place on September 4th and 5th. These dates apply not only to boroughs and townships, but are in force in cities of the first, second and third classes.

"Assessors in boroughs and townships may be called upon at any time before these last two days for the purpose of being assessed, and, where convenient, every prospective voter should attend to the matter before these days arrive and make certain that their names are properly assessed and registered.

"As to residents of cities:

"If you require a poll tax to vote, you must see that your name is on the assessors' list, otherwise you cannot pay a poll tax.

"Go to the assessor in your division on Tuesday, September 4th, or Wednesday, September 5th, and have him add your name to the list.

"Then you must be registered. All previous registrations are void in cities of the first, second and third classes.

"Therefore, you should go to the polling place on one of the following days to be personally registered:

First Registration Day—Thursday, September 6th.

Second Registration Day—Tuesday, September 18th.

Third (and last) Registration Day—Saturday, October 6th.

"Electors not able to show any other tax receipt may obtain a poll tax receipt at the time of registering from one of the registrars.

"First voters who desire to qualify for the presidential election will be interested in the following facts from the official digest of the Election Laws of Pennsylvania: They provide that 'If over 21 years of age and less than 22 at the date of election, they can vote without having paid a tax by making affidavit as to their age, and if residing in the city, having been registered.

"A voter becomes of age on the day before his 21st birthday. This year a person born on November 7th can vote on election day, November 6th, if registered and otherwise qualified."

"To insure the election of Hoover and Curtis, our Republican state, congressional and legislative tickets from top to bottom, every Republican can do a specific thing: Let every voter see to it that he or she is enrolled and registered and also prevail upon all friends and relatives to do likewise.

"If these important preliminaries are attended to, there can be no doubt of overwhelming success for the whole Republican ticket."

—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carroll and family, of Garden street, accompanied by Mrs. Carroll's father, Paul Berrer, of Washington, D. C., will leave on Saturday for Wildwood, N. J., where they will be registered for ten days at the Brinnell Apartments.

SPORT NEWS OF THE DAY

FULLYTOWN P. P. TEAM DEFEATS LOCAL A. O. H.

TULLYTOWN, Aug. 21.—By staging a five run rally in the eighth inning, Fulltown Paterson Parchment team rimmed the Bristol A. O. H. nine and extended its winning streak to thirteen.

The game was well played on both sides, not one miscue being chalked up for the Bristol lads while the locals had three.

Fine and Lawler were the boxmen and each appeared to be in the best of form. Fine fanned twelve batters while Lawler had eight. Fine was a little too generous with his passes but the Hiboes did not seem to take advantage of his generosity. Lawler allowed but four singles up until the seventh inning. He weakened in the seventh and completely cracked in the eighth when the Tullytown nine scored their winning runs. Gene was hit in the abdomen by a speedy line drive in this inning. After a long rest he managed to stay in the game.

Swangler and Phipps were the big men with the stick, each had three hits out of four times at bat. Carmen had two more singles. Russ has hit safely in every game played this season. Nickerson was stopped yesterday after boasting of the same record.

The feature of the game was a wonderful running catch of Fine's long drive by Rodgers. The hit was ticketed for three bases.

Fine had a wild streak in the first, but escaped danger. Thompson walked. McDevitt tried to sacrifice and fled to Fine. Leyden grounded out. Margerum and J. Brady were passed. Rodgers hit to Carmen and was out at first.

Cooper walked to begin the Tullytown first. On the hit and run play Swangler swung and missed and Cooper went out trying for second. Swangler singled to right. Swangler went to second on a passed ball. Helling hit to Lawler who threw to Margerum getting Swangler at third. Riola fanned.

Fine fanned H. Brady and Dougherty to begin the second. Lawler walked. Thompson doubled to center. McDevitt grounded to Riola.

Tullytown received another blank in the second. Afterbach walked and was caught off first. Lawler to Leyden. Fine whiffed. Phipps singled to right. Lawler fanned Carmen.

A. O. H. did not do any heart-breaking acts in the third. Leyden struck out. Margerum reached first on Carmen's missip. J. Brady breezed. Swangler chucked out Rodgers.

For Tullytown, Nickerson fanned. Cooper fled to Thompson. Swangler hit over short for a blingle. Helling was tossed out by Lawler.

The "Hiboes" broke into the run column in the fourth. H. Brady slammed one to left for two bases. Dougherty grounded to Helling. H. Brady holding second. H. Brady advanced to third on Thompson's hit. Afterbach had Thompson trying for second but Swangler dropped the ball, allowing H. Brady to count. McDevitt received a ticket to first. Leyden forced Thompson at the hot corner.

For Tullytown's fourth, Riola lofted to McDevitt. Afterbach again walked. Fine fled to H. Brady. Phipps looked at a third strike.

Margerum fanned to begin the fifth. J. Brady reached first when Helling dropped Riola's throw. Rodgers' short fly was caught by Riola. H. Brady fled to right.

Lawler pitched good in the Tullytown fifth. Carmen struck out. Nickerson rolled to Leyden. Cooper skied to left.

The Hibernians failed to tally in the sixth canto. Dougherty missed a third strike. Lawler bugged a hit to left. Thompson whiffed. McDevitt's fly went to Cooper.

A double play stopped Tullytown in their part. Swangler was hit in the slats with the ball. Helling, in attempting to sacrifice popped to J. Brady. Brady's throw to Leyden was too high and went into right field. The ball was retrieved in time to get Swangler trying to get back to first. Riola hit to center for a base. Afterbach fouled to Leyden.

Hibernians scored another run in the seventh. Leyden singled. Leyden went to second on a wild pitch. J. Brady scored Leyden with a hit over third. Rodgers fled out. H. Brady went out. Helling unassisted.

Tullytown finally scored a run in their half. Rodgers robbed Fine of a hit by a nice running catch of his fly. Phipps singled and went to third on Carmen's hit over third. Nickerson was out. McDevitt to Leyden. Phipps counting. Cooper struck out.

The Bristol team took the run back in the eighth. McClafferty walked and advanced to third on Lawler's blingle.

Defends Title in Annual Tourney

WALKER CUP TEAM EXPECTS A HARD FIGHT

By Dr. William Tweddell
Captain of the British Walker Cup Team and British Amateur Champion in 1927

As Told to Copeland C. Burg, (INS Staff Correspondent)

Bobo-Link Golf Course, Highland Park, Ill., Aug. 21.—We members of the British Walker Cup Team are looking to a hard fight from the Americans and we realize we have a very fine American team to play. We have a good all-around side and the British team is truly representative of the British Isles, as we have players from Scotland, Ireland and England.

We hope that the golf we play will be good enough to win and if it isn't good enough we will be the first to congratulate the American players on their victory.

We players are very glad, indeed, to be in the United States. We are having a gorgeous time and everyone is treating us marvelously.

Speaking for all the players I may say we feel there is a great deal more to the Walker Cup matches than the mere playing of golf. These visits of American players to England and the British players to America bring a closer understanding and lead to the establishment of an everlasting friendship between the United States and Great Britain, not only in sport but in everything.

We are pleased to find everywhere in America so much interest in golf. I hope the matches with America's stars are closely contested and that they produce some thrilling shots, such as the great American player, Bobby Jones, is noted for.
